

Co-operating Processes

- Processes may be entirely independant
- They may also work together to form a system.
- In order to work together they must
 - Access common data areas
 - Synchronise their activities

The Exclusion Problem

- Whenever processes cooperate they run the risk of endangering shared data
- We must ensure that execution of critical sections of code is mutually exclusive